Notes on contributors

Patrick Collinson, the pre-eminent historian of English Puritanism, was Regius Professor of Modern History at the University of Cambridge from 1988 to 1996, a Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, and a Fellow of the British Academy. His extensive body of work on the religious and political history of Elizabethan and early Stuart England continues to exert powerful influence. His final book, published posthumously, was Richard Bancroft and Elizabethan Anti-Puritanism (2013).

Alexander Courtney is the Head of History at the Haberdashers' Aske's Boys' School, Elstree. He took up the post in 2011, having previously taught at Tonbridge School, Kent, and the Perse School, Cambridge. He studied at Selwyn College, Cambridge, where he gained a double-starred first-class degree in History in 2003. He went on to undertake graduate study into aspects of Jacobean kingship and politics, obtaining degrees of M.Phil. in Early Modern History in 2004 and a Ph.D. in 2008.

Susan Doran is a Senior Research Fellow in History at Jesus College, Oxford. Her books include Monarchy and Matrimony (1993), England and Europe in the Sixteenth Century (1999), The Tudor Chronicles (2008) and Elizabeth I and her Intimates (forthcoming). She has also co-edited several volumes of essays and edited three exhibition catalogues.

Richard Dutton is a Humanities Distinguished Professor of English at Ohio State University. He has published widely on early modern drama, especially on censorship and authorship. His books include Mastering the Revels: the Regulation and Censorship of English Renaissance Drama (1991), Licensing, Censorship and Authorship in Early Modern England: Buggeswords (2000) and the edition of Jonson's Epicene (2003). His most recent publications are The Oxford Handbook of Early Modern Theatre (2009) and an edition of Volpone in the Cambridge Ben Jonson (2012). With Steven Galbraith he is preparing an edition of Thomas Drue's The Duchess of Suffolk and he is currently completing a monograph, Shakespeare, Court Dramatist.

Alexandra Gajda is John Walsh Fellow and Tutor in History at Jesus College, Oxford. She is the author of The Earl of Essex and Late Elizabethan Political Culture (2012) and of essays and articles on ideas and politics in late sixteenth- and early seventeenth-century England.

Arnold Hunt is a Curator of Historical Manuscripts at the British Library, and a Senior Research Fellow at King's College London. His book The Art of Hearing: English Preachers and their Audiences 1590–1640 was published in 2010, and his current research focuses on religion and gesture in early modern England.

Paulina Kewes is a Fellow and Tutor in English Literature at Jesus College, Oxford. Her books include Authorship and Appropriation: Writing for the Stage in England, 1660–1710 (1998), This Great Matter of Succession: Politics, History, and Elizabethan Drama (forthcoming) and, as editor or co-editor, Plagiarism in Early Modern England (2003), The Uses of History in Early Modern England (2006), and The Oxford Handbook of Holinshed's Chronicles (2013). She is a Co-Investigator on the AHRC-funded Stuart Successions project.

Peter Lake holds the position of University Distinguished Professor of Early Modern English History at Vanderbilt University. He taught previously at the universities of London and Princeton. He is currently working on a study of Shakespeare's histories and the politics of the 1590s and on turning his Ford lectures on 'Bad queen Bess? Libelous secret histories in an age of confessional conflict' into a book.

Richard A. McCabe is a Professor of English Language and Literature at Oxford University and a Fellow of Merton College. He was elected a Fellow of the British Academy in 2007. He currently holds a Major Leverhulme Research Fellowship (2011–14). He is author of Joseph Hall: A Study in Satire and Meditation (1982), The Pillars of Eternity: Time and Providence in 'The Faerie Queene' (1989), Incest, Drama, and Nature's Law 1550–1700 (1993) and Spenser's Monstrous Regiment: Elizabethan Ireland and the Poetics of Difference (2002). He is the editor of the Penguin edition of Spenser's Shorter Poems (1999). Most recently he has edited the Oxford Handbook of Edmund Spenser (2010), and is currently working on a monograph on literary patronage.

Thomas M. McCoog, SJ, the sometime Director of Publications at the Jesuit Historical Institute (Rome), is currently the Archivist of the British Province of the Society of Jesus (London) and Curator of the Archives of Avery, Cardinal Dulles, at Fordham University (New York). He has published widely on British and Irish Jesuits. His most recent publication is 'And touching our society': Fashioning Jesuit Identity in Elizabethan England (2013).

Michael Questier is a Professor of Early Modern English History at Queen Mary University of London. He has published widely on various aspects of post-reformation English Catholicism and is currently working on an overview volume on that subject and, in collaboration with Peter Lake, on the accession crisis of King James VI and I.

Rory Rapple is an Assistant Professor in the Department of History at the University of Notre Dame. He is the author of Martial Power and Elizabethan Political Culture: Military Men in England and Ireland 1558–1594 (2009). He is currently working on a biography of Sir Humphrey Gilbert as well as on other topics to do with English political thinking in the sixteenth century.

R. Malcolm Smuts is a Professor Emeritus of the University of Massachusetts at Boston. His publications include Court Culture and the Origins of a Royalist Tradition in England (1987), Culture and Power in England 1585–1685 (1999) and numerous articles on the political and cultural history of early modern England. He is currently engaged in a study of problems of religious instability in late Elizabethan and early Stuart Britain.

Blair Worden has taught at the universities of Oxford, Cambridge, Sussex, London and Chicago and is an Emeritus Fellow of St Edmund Hall, Oxford. His books include The Sound of Virtue: Philip Sidney's 'Arcadia' and Elizabethan Politics (1996), Literature and Politics in Cromwellian England: John Milton, Andrew Marvell, Marchamont Nedham (2007) and a series of studies of the political and religious history of the Puritan revolution.