The idea and title for this volume appeared in 2007 in the wake of a stay at Yale University, where I benefited from a post-doctoral grant from the Program in Agrarian Studies, as well as a grant from the Danish Research Council for Social Sciences. Most of the chapters in the volume were presented in a first version at a workshop in Copenhagen in 2010, which was funded by the Danish Institute for International Studies. All the way, colleagues and friends have received the idea with a warming enthusiasm and inspiring anecdotes. I owe particular thanks to Richard Kernaghan, Christophe Robert and Regnar Kristensen for the first push; to James Scott, Claudio Lomnitz, James Siegel, Darius Rejali, Pamela Gupta, Thomas Blom Hansen and Sharika Thiranagama for inspiring conversations on the way; to Joost Fontein, Yehonathan Alsheh, the series editors and two anonymous readers for their thorough comments on draft versions; to Élisabeth Anstett, Jean-Marc Dreyfus, Ravinder Kaur, Henrik Rønsbo, Robin May Schott, Filip de Boeck and the rest of the participants for their contributions to the workshop; and not least to the authors who contributed to this volume with patience, hard work and inspiring ideas. Finally I would like to thank Ellen-Marie Bentsen and Susanne Kolodnizajczyk Knudsen at DIIS, Laurence Radford from the Corpses and Mass Violence programme, as well as the staff of Manchester University Press, for gently assisting in the finalisation of the volume.
